

Judith McCarty

DIRECTOR, INTEL OPERATIONS

Judith is responsible for establishing this new division within the company to include policies, plans, budget and revenue. She also serves as Deputy PM for NSETS Team.

Judith has over 30 year of Intel and is an award-winning, dynamic leader with extensive experience managing operations and security systems in both domestic and international environments. Adept at leading strategic long-term planning as well as infrastructure development for new organizations, driving future business growth and ensuring stable, efficient operations. She has demonstrated success developing and implementing technical programs and systems, resulting in significantly reduced costs, improved productivity, and high levels of customer satisfaction. She has a solid background in security operations, including U.S. information systems, encryption codes, cyber threats, security product development, and foreign intelligence and is recognized as a leading team builder capable of achieving low turnover rates by maintaining positive morale through effective communications. Expertise includes budgeting, data systems, training, program management, business development, inventory, and operational management. Judith is a Founding Member and current member of the Board of Directors of the Information Assurance Small Business Association (IASBA). This Maryland-based not-for-profit organization was established in response to senior government officials desires to increase visibility into the small business community in the area of Information Assurance and Information Security. She recently co-authored 'A Proposed Solution for Sensor Management' which was selected for inclusion at the Charleston Defense Contractors Annual C4ISR Conference. Credentials include: M.B.A., P.M.P., C.I.S.M., and Top Secret SCI clearance with full scope polygraph.